

TRADESHOW PRINTING ESSENTIALS

TRADESHOW CHECKLIST

1. Set your objectives

Put together a list of the top three objectives you want your trade show program to accomplish

2. Set your budget

Adjust your budget based on the objectives you have set a month ago, your current finances and any opportunities that you think might pop up. Your budget is the biggest part of your trade show plan – it's what everything else hinges on, so make sure that you have a good handle on it before you go forward.

3. Choose the trade shows you plan to go to.

Adjust your budget based on the objectives you have set a month ago, your current finances and any opportunities that you think might pop up. Your budget is the biggest part of your trade show plan – it's what everything else hinges on, so make sure that you have a good handle on it before you go forward.

4. Evaluate and revitalize your trade show booth as needed.

Review your current trade show pop up display. Does it still let you achieve your marketing objectives? If so, keep it. Otherwise, build a new one.

5. Research technology.

There is more than a dozen trade show apps out there on the market, useful for everything from communication to marketing, social media and lead capture.

6. Review the show's site.

If the show has a web page, review it. Make sure you know exactly when it's going to take place, where it's going to take place, and where your booth is going to go. Many trade show sites have accounts that you can sign up for that allow you to choose where your booth is going to go – use them. You don't want to get to the show and have nothing left but the dregs

7. Create your promotions.

Promotions are a big part of your trade show marketing plan – they help your booth staffers engage attendees and bring in a greater number of qualified leads to your booth.

8. Get your booth literature designed.

The development time for a brochure can vary, but plan on 3-4 weeks. This is just for the design, writing, revisions and approval – it does not include the time it takes your brochure to get from the printer to your literature display.

9. Order your printing and promotions.

You're giving out promotional items at the show, so select and order those materials now – some can take up to a month to be made and printed so best to order in advance.

10. Choose your staffers.

Finalize who you want beside you when you're at the show.

11. Arrange your travel.

Purchase hotels and flights for you and your booth staff.

12. Ship out your exhibit

13. Train your booth staff.

Set up meetings with your booth staff to train them on your main clients who you expect to be at the show and key products you will be showcasing.

14. Verify that your trade show display has arrived.

15. Go through your trade show checklist thoroughly for any last-minute errors you may have overlooked.

TRADESHOW CHECKLIST

16. Build a document packet and make backups.

Make sure that you have all your contacts, including your staff lists and any expected individuals/companies who will be coming to the show in a list. Include in this file any required graphics you will use at the show.

17. Presentation Packs

Put together a list of the top three objectives you want your trade show program to accomplish

AT THE SHOW

18. Make sure that you're at your best and make it happen.

Execute all the plans that you've spent the past six months planning.

IMMEDIATELY AFTER THE SHOW

19. Fulfill your leads.

Give your customers the information packs you promised. The packs will be a good reminder of what you talked about at the trade show. No matter how many leads you have, you need to make sure they get into the hands of your sales team so that they can be turned into sales.

20. Check your costs.

Review what you spent money on and compare it to the budget you set before the show. See if you're still on budget, and, if not, why not?

21. Review the objectives you set.

Did you get as many leads as you hoped you would? As many sales? Did your marketing materials make their return on investment?

22. Did you have enough marketing collateral for everyone who came to your booth?
